12 No. CR-12-6043-FVS-1

13 No. CR-12-6043-FVS-2

14 ORDER DENYING MOTION TO 15 DISMISS

17 THIS MATTER came before the Court on January 11, 2013, based upon 18 the defendants' motion to dismiss. Colleen Patridge-Staudinger was 19 represented by James E. Egan. Richard A. Flaiz, M.D., was represented 20 by William D. McCool. The government was represented by Alexander C.
21 Ekstrom.

23 BACKGROUND

24 A number of allegations are set forth below. The Court has drawn 25 them from the Indictment. The Court expresses no opinion with respect 26 to their accuracy. After all, allegations are just that -- allegations. It remains to be seen whether the government can prove any of them.

The government alleges dysport and xeomin are prescription drugs.
They can be injected under a person's skin in order to treat wrinkles.
Colleen Patridge-Staudinger is licensed to engage in the practice of 1 esthetics in the State of Washington. On a number of occasions during 2 2011 and 2012, she obtained either dysport or xeomin from Richard A.

3 Flaiz, M.D., at his office in the State of Oregon. Acting pursuant to 4 his instructions, she brought the drugs into the State of Washington 5 and injected them into patients in order to eliminate wrinkles.

6 Dr. Flaiz is licensed to practice medicine in the State of 7 Oregon, but not in the State of Washington. In the government's 8 opinion, he violated federal law by directing Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger 9 to administer the injections that are described in the Indictment, and 10 she violated federal law by administering them. The government's 11 opinion is based, in part, upon provisions that are set forth in 21 12 U.S.C. § 353(b)(1)(C) and 21 U.S.C. § 331(k). It is useful to begin 13 with § 353(b). A drug which is covered by that paragraph "shall be 14 dispensed only . . . upon a written prescription of a practitioner
15 licensed by law to administer such drug, . . . ." 21 U.S.C. § 16 353(b)(1)(C). "The act of dispensing a drug contrary to the 17 provisions of this paragraph shall be deemed to be an act which 18 results in the drug being misbranded while held for sale." Id. The 19 Eighth Circuit summarized § 353(b)(1)(C) in United States v. Smith, 20 573 F.3d 639 (8th Cir. 2009). "A drug is 'misbranded,'" said the 21 Eighth Circuit, "unless dispensed upon a 'prescription of a 22 practitioner licensed by law to administer such drug.'" Id. at 650
23 (quoting 21 U.S.C. § 353(b)(1)(C)). The government alleges Dr. Flaiz 24 was not licensed to prescribe the injections that are described in the 25 Indictment. It follows, says the government, that Mrs. Patridge-26

1 Staudinger was not authorized to administer them. Consequently, 2 according to the government, Dr. Flaiz and Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger 3 misbranded the injections she administered. Misbranding a drug is 4 unlawful. 21 U.S.C. § 331(k).

5 On August 14, 2012, a grand jury returned an indictment charging 6 Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger and Dr. Flaiz with one count of conspiracy to 7 misbrand prescription drugs, 18 U.S.C. § 371, and four counts of 8 misbranding prescription drugs, 21 U.S.C. § 353(b)(1). The defendants 9 move to dismiss the indictment. They argue the government has 10 misstated the law. According to them, Dr. Flaiz was authorized to 11 supervise Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger in the State of Washington.

12 RULE 12(b)

13 The defendants are bringing their motion to dismiss under Federal 14 Rules of Criminal procedure 12(b)(2) and 12(b)(3)(B). Rule 12(b)(2) 15 states, "A party may raise by pretrial motion any defense, objection, 16 or request that the court can determine without a trial of the general 17 issue." However, neither Rule 12(b)(2) nor any other Federal Rule of 18 Criminal Procedure authorizes a motion for summary judgment in a 19 criminal case. United States v. Jensen, 93 F.3d 667, 669 (9th 20 Cir.1996) (citing United States v. Critzer, 951 F.2d 306, 307 (11th 21 Cir.1992) (per curiam)). Thus, when a defendant moves to dismiss 22 based upon the government's alleged inability to prove an element of 23 the charge, a district court must determine whether the issue raised 24 by the defendant's motion is "entirely segregable from the evidence to 25 be presented at trial." United States v. Shortt Accountancy Corp.,

1 785 F.2d 1448, 1452 (9th Cir.), (internal punctuation and citations
2 omitted), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1007, 106 S.Ct. 3301, 92 L.Ed.2d 715 3 (1986). If resolution of the motion "is substantially founded upon 4 and intertwined with evidence concerning the alleged offense, the 5 motion falls within the province of the ultimate finder of fact and 6 must be deferred." Id. (internal quotation and citations omitted).

7 The defendants are also relying upon Rule 12(b) (3). It states in 8 pertinent part, "[A]t any time while the case is pending, the court 9 may hear a claim that the indictment or information fails . . . to 10 state an offense." The Court's inquiry under Rule 12(b) (3) (B) is 11 "narrow." United States v. Moore, 563 F.3d 583, 586 (7th Cir.2009).
12 When determining whether an indictment states an offense, a court "is 13 bound by the four corners of the indictment . . .[, and] "must accept 14 the truth of the allegations in the indictment[.]" United States v.
15 Boren, 278 F.3d 911, 914 (9th Cir.2002) (citations omitted). "An 16 indictment fails to state an offense if the specific facts alleged in 17 it 'fall beyond the scope of the relevant criminal statute, as a 18 matter of statutory interpretation.'" United States v. Vitillo, 490 19 F.3d 314, 321 (3d Cir.2007) (quoting United States v. Panarella, 277 20 F.3d 678, 685 (3d Cir.2002)).

22 ANALYSIS

23 A drug that falls within the scope of § 353(b) "shall be 24 dispensed only . . . upon a written prescription of a practitioner
25 licensed by law to administer such drug, . . . ." 21 U.S.C. §
26 353(b) (1) (C). The preceding provision does not expressly require a 1 practitioner to be licensed in the state in which a regulated drug is 2 administered. Instead, it requires only that he be "licensed by law 3 to administer such drug." Dr. Flaiz is licensed to practice medicine 4 in Oregon. The government acknowledges he is licensed to prescribe 5 dysport and xeomin injections in that state. The defendants maintain 6 Dr. Flaiz's authority to prescribe injections is not limited to 7 Oregon. In support of this contention, they cite RCW 18.71.030(6), 8 which permits:

9       The practice of medicine by any practitioner licensed by 10      another state or territory in which he or she resides, 11      provided that such practitioner shall not open an office or 12      appoint a place of meeting patients or receiving calls 13      within this state; . . .

14      The defendants allege Dr. Flaiz complied with RCW 18.71.030(6).
15      According to them, he did not open an office in the State of 16      Washington. Nor, as they view the record, did he establish a place in 17      Washington to meet patients. Nor did he receive calls in this state.
18      Thus, in the defendants' opinion, Dr. Flaiz did not exceed the 19      authority that is conferred by RCW 18.71.030(6).

20      The government rejects the defendants' interpretation of RCW 21      18.71.030(6). In the government's opinion, the statute does not 22      authorize Dr. Flaiz to supervise Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger's injections 23      in the State of Washington. The government's position is based, in 24      part, upon its reading of State v. Tracy, 158 Wn.2d 683, 147 P.3d 559
25      (2006). Tracy involved the Washington State Medical Use of Cannabis 26      Act, chapter 69.51A RCW. The defendant, Sharon Tracy, was charged

1 with manufacturing marijuana. 158 Wn.2d at 685-86. She attempted to 2 establish she was a "qualifying patient" within the meaning of chapter 3 69.51A and, thus, entitled to present a "compassionate use defense."
4 In order to do so, she had to demonstrate she was "a patient of a 5 physician licensed under chapter 18.71 . . . ." 158 Wn.2d at 688.
6 Neither of the physicians who allegedly endorsed her use of marijuana 7 was licensed by the State of Washington. Both were licensed by other 8 states. As a result, the Washington Supreme Court had to decide 9 whether either physician was a "qualified physician" within the 10 meaning of chapter 69.51A. The Supreme Court ruled against Ms. Tracy.
11 In essence, the Supreme Court distinguished between two classes of 12 physicians. One class is composed of physicians who are formally 13 licensed by the State of Washington to practice medicine in this 14 state. The other class is composed of physicians who are formally 15 licensed by another state to practice medicine in that state, but who, 16 in certain limited circumstances, are permitted by the State of 17 Washington to practice medicine here. 158 Wn.2d at 689-90. Only 18 physicians who fall within the first class -- i.e., physicians who are 19 formally licensed by the State of Washington -- are "qualified 20 physicians" within the meaning of chapter 69.51A. 158 Wn.2d at 690.
21 In reaching that conclusion, the state Supreme Court mentioned RCW 22 18.71.030(6), but did not attempt to establish its parameters. The 23 state Supreme Court's most extensive comment about RCW 18.71.030(6) 24 was this, "But the exception relied upon by Tracy does not include all 25 out-of-state physicians for every purpose; it merely permits out-of-

1 state physicians temporarily within the state, but without an office 2 or similar professional connections, to practice their calling while 3 in Washington." 158 Wn.2d at 690. The preceding statement does not 4 provide this Court with enough guidance to anticipate how the 5 Washington Supreme Court would respond to Dr. Flaiz's interpretation 6 of RCW 18.71.030(6), and the Washington Supreme Court is the 7 authoritative interpreter of state law. See Golden West Refining Co.
8 v. SunTrust Bank, 538 F.3d 1233, 1237 (9th Cir.2008) (diversity 9 jurisdiction). Perhaps the Washington Supreme Court would embrace Dr.
10 Flaiz's interpretation; perhaps not. This Court cannot be sure.

11 RULING

12 Dismissal is appropriate under Rule 12(b) only if the defendants 13 can identify a dispositive legal issue that is segregable from the 14 evidence which will be presented at their trial. This is not such a 15 case. The defendants maintain RCW 18.71.030(6) authorized Dr. Flaiz 16 to supervise Mrs. Patridge-Staudinger. In order to prevail, they must 17 demonstrate that he did "not open an office or appoint a place of 18 meeting patients or receiving calls within this state[.]" Those are 19 factual issues. Absent a stipulation of facts (and there is none), 20 the Court cannot exclude the possibility that Dr. Flaiz's actions fell 21 outside the scope of RCW 18.71.030(6). Since the legal issue that the 22 defendants have raised cannot be segregated from the evidence that 23 will be presented at trial, and since it is unclear whether the 24 Washington Supreme Court would adopt Dr. Flaiz's interpretation of RCW 25 18.71.030(6), the defendants are not entitled to dismissal prior to

1 trial under Rule 12(b). This is a narrow ruling. The Court is not 2 ratifying the government's decision to charge the defendants with 3 crimes (as opposed to seeking a non-criminal resolution of the 4 dispute), nor is the Court indicating the government will be able to 5 avoid a motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 29.
6 That remains to be seen. All the Court is saying is this: Given the 7 existence of material factual disputes, given the lack of an 8 authoritative interpretation of Washington law, and given the 9 constraints imposed by Rule 12(b), the defendants' motion to dismiss 10 must be denied.

11 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

12 The defendants' "Motion to Dismiss Indictment" (ECF No. 31) is 13 denied.

14 IT IS SO ORDERED. The District Court Executive is hereby 15 directed to enter this order and furnish copies to counsel.

16 DATED this 14th day of January, 2013.
